ASEAN 2025: FORGING AHEAD, TOGETHER?
ASEAN has targeted achievement of its aspirations across all three community pillars in just eight years. The lack of political will, however, has undermined perceptions of ASEAN's effectiveness in balancing geopolitical dynamics and in positively changing the lives of its citizens. With under a decade to go, can ASEAN fulfil the action lines and strategic measures it set out for itself in Vision 2025? Can ASEAN activities translate into actions that meaningfully impact the lives of its people? How can ASEAN forge ahead together when national interests diverge?

As ASEAN works on forging ahead together towards 2025, how will ASEAN shape its longer-term vision and direction for its next 50 years? What foreseeable changes to the existing structure and/or membership of ASEAN might be expected? Will the ideas of ASEAN unity and centrality prevail as power balances shift in the region? Can ASEAN balance between its regional interests and national interests of its individual member states? What will an ASEAN Community look like over the next half-century? How can ASEAN be more relevant and meaningful to its people, particularly the youths of today who will be the leaders of tomorrow?
